

POL #	Training attendance etiquette policy	Creation date: 2025 – 01 - 08
Responsible department	iRam HR Department

The Purpose

This Policy outlines expectations regarding following a few general guidelines that can help keep your interactions professional when being invited to a training meeting with colleagues online or face-to-face classroom training. The policy also details disciplinary actions for non-compliance and rewards for good attendance.

Etiquette is vital in every aspect, including online learning. Etiquette does not mean highly formal meetings; it is about simple rules that must be followed to make the training enjoyable for everyone.

Overview

To allow for a good atmosphere that motivates learners to pay attention, participate, and focus on learning. This guide will help you take the level of professionalism of your training sessions to the next level and have better reviews and higher satisfaction rates.

Training attendance Etiquette List

1. Email responds etiquette
2. Dress appropriately (IRam Uniform)
3. Meeting etiquette
4. Be on time(Arrive or join the meeting early)
5. Maintain personal hygiene
6. Show respect in meetings
7. Greet everyone
8. Respect personal space
9. Consider your body language
10. Phone on Silent
11. Limit unnecessary noise
12. Always have your Camera during online Training
13. Look at the person who is speaking to you.
14. Show respect in meetings
15. Appropriate social interaction at work
16. Avoid Interrupting during training sessions
17. Take responsibility
18. Respect the Trainer
19. Break Etiquette
20. 20.Break Etiquette

1.Email responds etiquette

If you've been invited to a meeting, you must reply – the sooner, the better! A timely response is critical for securing your place at the meeting. If you choose to decline or reschedule, a prompt and professional reply can protect your reputation.

2. Dress appropriately (IRam Uniform)

Presentable look is about something other than formal dressing. You can dress casually and be yourself as in everyday life.

Adequate appearance is about being put together. For instance, ensure your clothes are clean, and you are not joining a call with underwear while the camera is on.

Always wear IRam provided Uniform to training

Black or white comfortable shoes

Black Pants/Skirt / Black or Blue Jeans not ripped or torn.

Clothing that reveals too much cleavage, your back, your chest, your stomach or your underwear is not appropriate.

Clothing should be clean, pressed and free of wrinkles. Torn, dirty, or frayed clothing is unacceptable.

Clothing should be comfortable and practical for work, but never distracting or offensive to others.

3. Meeting etiquette

Employees need to ensure that they follow the set-out rule during a training session or a meeting. To ensure that they create an environment where all participants can contribute effectively, ensuring that the objectives of the meeting are met without unnecessary disruptions whether on line/virtual or face to face/in class training.

4.Etiquette Rules for Professional Virtual Training

Rule

It helps us to be aware of the feelings and rights of others, eliminating discourteous behaviour and prioritising other people's feelings, etiquette promotes kindness, consideration, and humility.

3.1Muting and unmuting

Muting and unmuting rules are pretty important in virtual training. When you are not talking, mute your microphone to avoid noises, voices, or any minor inconveniences that may interrupt the smooth training session.

3.2 No background noise

Another simple rule that can be easily achieved through muting your microphone is avoiding background noise. However, if the session includes discussions at some point, you should unmute the microphone. Therefore, choose a place with minimal background noise.

3.3No distractions

A simple etiquette rule that greatly improves the quality of online training is avoiding distractions to be able to stay focused on the session.

3.4 Being present

When joining a training online or face to face, be present in training be actively engaged and interested in the activities. Switch off your phone or put in on silent and switch on your camera at all times unless the if the is a clear instruction to switch it off, most training programs are paid at the end of the day, and if you truly want to gain valuable knowledge and skills, you should be present and participate.

3.5 Keep the background neat and clean

You must ensure that you are in an appropriate place.

Remember to participate in discussions and unmute your microphone. If the instructor asks a question, ensure you are familiar with the policies. Try not to jump in but raise a hand or ask whether you should answer.

3.6 Sort out any technical Issues

Before starting a session, make sure your equipment works well. Check the camera, microphone and of course the internet connection.

Technical issues should be avoided as smoothly as possible for a better quality of the sessions.

Etiquette Rules for Professional face to face Training

Use a friendly smile and welcoming voice. Consider the distance you are standing from the person. Listen to the person. Speak directly to the person.

5.Be on time(Arrive or join the meeting early)

If you've been invited to a meeting, you must respect your peers and instructor. So, show up on time and even a few minutes earlier to ensure your connection is good and there are no other technical issues. Being on time is the most basic and easy-to-follow etiquette rule one can do.

6.Maintain personal hygiene

Good personal hygiene is vital because it helps stop you from getting sick. It also helps stop you from spreading germs and infectious diseases. The germs that cause many diseases can be passed on by: touching other people.

Everyone should maintain personal hygiene at work. It's professional, considerate, and creates a healthier environment for everyone.

7.Show respect in meetings

promote an atmosphere of mutual respect. It can also help prevent misunderstandings, reduce conflict, and encourage open dialogue where everyone feels comfortable sharing their thoughts without bias.

8.Greet everyone

This is a sign to prove that you acknowledge their presence. This is a vital part of courtesy and goodwill.

9.Respect personal space

Respecting personal space is essential for building positive relationships and creating a comfortable environment for everyone. By being mindful of others' boundaries, we can foster trust, reduce conflict, and enhance mutual respect in various settings.

10.Consider your body language

A positive learning environment is key for effective language acquisition. Using open, friendly body language, like smiling and nodding, helps create an atmosphere of trust and openness.

11. Phone on Silent

Cell phones can be loud— In today's digital age, it's crucial to exercise restraint with electronic devices during training sessions. Silence or switch off mobile phones to minimize distractions and prioritize focus. If you must attend to urgent matters, step out discreetly to avoid disrupting the session.

even if you put them on vibrate—but if you are using a cell phone for academics, there is no reason to set phones on ring OR vibrate. After all, you might end up focusing on the training activity, not all calls and texts. When you use your phones in class, you will be more likely to make sure that your phone is on silent before class—that means no more loud, accidental alarms, calls, or text messages.

12. Limit unnecessary noise

Any sound which disturbs or impairs or may disturb or impair the convenience or peace of any person. Sounds that are excessively loud, disruptive, or intrusive, often violating local noise ordinances or causing disturbance to individuals or communities

13. Always have your Camera during online Training

Keeping cameras on during virtual meetings helps build better relationships among team members, as scholars find. Visual cues, such as facial expressions and body language, play a significant role in how we understand and interpret others' emotions and intentions.

14. Maintaining eye contact.

Make eye contact before you start talking to someone. Use the 50/70 rule. Maintain eye contact 50% of the time when speaking and 70% when listening. Look for 4–5 seconds.

15. Show respect in meetings

RESPECT your team members before your meeting by sending out an agenda, RESPECT them during the meeting by sticking to your schedule and listening, and RESPECT them after the meeting by providing a follow up with meeting results.

16. Appropriate social interaction during training

The will to interact meaning fully with the team. The ability to maintain a topic (or change topic appropriately or interrupt politely); • The ability to maintain appropriate eye-contact (not too much staring and not too much looking away) during a conversation; and. • The ability to distinguish how to talk and behave towards different communicative.

17. Avoid Interrupting during training sessions

Recognizing each person's unique perspective and knowledge; Considering different opinions and controlling the Rebuttal Brain (which ..

- Realize You're Interrupting.
- Match the Pace of the Other Person.
- Use a Reminder Gesture.
- Be Interested, Not Interesting.
- Let Go of the Need to Add a Point.
- Stop and Apologize When You Do Interrupt.

18. Take accountability and responsibility

Have common purpose, clear expectations, communication and alignment, coaching and collaboration, and consequences and results.

19. Respect the Trainer

Show appreciation for the trainer's expertise and efforts by actively listening, maintaining eye contact, and refraining from side conversations. Follow instructions attentively and seek clarification when needed. Refrain to asking too many or irrelevant questions and do not argue with the trainer. Remember, the trainer is there to facilitate learning and deserves your full attention and respect.

20. Break Etiquette

Utilize break times effectively for networking, refreshments, or brief relaxation. Be mindful of others' space and avoid monopolizing the refreshment area. Use breaks to recharge and network with fellow participants, fostering valuable connections and camaraderie.

Objective of this Policy

The implementation of this Policy and Procedure is essential for the efficient running of training and system tools within the Business.

This policy and procedure outlines rules that govern the use and requirements of the company's systems and describes the action, which may be taken by the Company in the event of a transgression or non-compliance. This document has been written to ensure that discipline is procedurally and substantively fair and is applied in accordance with an effective disciplinary procedure.

Employee Name (print): _____

Signature : _____

Date : _____

